Director's website tip: Earth Day

On April 22, 1970 over 20 million people across the United States celebrated the first Earth Day. Long before green energy, global warming, recycling, and Al Gore were household words, a growing number of citizens began turning their concerns for the environment into action. Forty years later, more than 1 billion people worldwide celebrate and take part in this event.

You may actually remember the first Earth Day, and may have participated in some of the activities. If you don't remember (or weren't even around back then!), this handy web site gives the historic background of Earth Day, and also provides recommended articles and videos on topics such as global warming, species extinction, and natural disasters.

There are also links to key themes, people, time-lines, and related topics.

Earth Day is the time to get active and make the planet a better place for everyone. The "What you can do" link takes you to other pages where you can :

- Attend local Earth Day events.
 - Organize your own event.
 - Become a green volunteer.
- There is also information on earth-friendly things you can do every day:
- Help save the planet at work.
 - Learn how to "green" your clothing, pets and car.
 - Take simple steps to make a difference and rev up the "green factor" in your life.

Long before green energy, global warming, recycling, and Al Gore were household words, a growing number of citizens began turning their concerns for the environment into action.

Celebrate Earth Day every day!

Copyrights and wrongs: coming soon

What is Copyright?

What is protected by Copyright? What is not?

What can be considered "Fair Use"?

How do I obtain permission ?

How does the Kinko ruling affect coursepacks?

These and other questions that concern educational use and misuse of copyrighted material will be presented by the library director at an upcoming faculty brown-bag lunch. This beginning exploration of our copyright use on campus has an end purpose of developing a copyright policy for Bryn Athyn College

In preparation for the discussion you may want to check out the following web sites:

In addition, Educause (a nonprofit association that promotes the intelligent use of information technology) has critiqued a number of web sites that feature information and tutorials on copyright, with emphasis on academic use. Check it out at:

Stay tuned: the date and time of this brown-bag event will be announced soon.

Notes from the Archives: Conclusion

In the last issue of BI-lines, I explained how we would make our collections more accessible using modern finding aids. While the archives would like to get all our donations on the shelf quickly, we currently have a large backlog of materials that found their way into the archives over many years.

Sorting random piles of individual items is not what archives are best equipped to do, although the indomitable archives assistants and volunteers are making slow but sure progress. To aid our efforts, we ask again that there not be "drop-offs" or unsolicited items mailed to the archives that will contribute to this backlog.

You can call or e-mail us at any time to discuss material that you feel belongs in the archives. Someone will even come to evaluate your material and, if necessary, transport it to the archives. If lead, work for, or belong to groups or organizations that need to be represented in the archives (Theta Alpha, or B-Act, for example) and have material you would like to donate, please feel free to contact us so that we can devise a system for collecting the items that are necessary and proper for inclusion.

Finally, I'd like to thank the dozens of volunteers and hundreds of donors over the years who have troubled themselves to give their time and collections to the archives. Without the help of these generous contributors, the archives would not be the success that it is today. If you would like to help, whether it be working in the archives or representing your organization's material, please contact us and let us know how you'd like to be involved.

Staff updates

In memory of Clyde Smith who passed away in January and was the husband of long-time library worker Audrey Smith, the library has purchased several CDs featuring the music of Robert Shaw. Added to our collection are: Sacred: inspirational and spiritual music for choir and orchestra; Elegy; Absolute heaven: essential choral masterpieces; and Gloria: music of praise and inspiration.

One of our most faithful volunteers, Sally Smith, was injured in a fall last month and is currently hospitalized and undergoing rehabilitation.

We miss her, and wish her the best in her recovery.

Elaine Kim, a faculty member who also works part time as a cataloger, was granted United States citizenship in a ceremony that took place on April 8 in Philadelphia. A native of South Korea, Elaine shared her experience with 185 other new citizens from 44 countries.

Congratulations, Elaine!

Swedenborg Library Mission Statement

The primary purpose of the Swedenborg Library is the acquisition, preservation and promotion of the New Church collections and archives for use throughout the world.

- These collections include books written by Swedenborg (first editions, subsequent editions and translations), copies of books known to have been owned by Swedenborg, and books and periodicals of the 17th and 18th centuries (particularly in the sciences and religion) either used by Swedenborg or reflecting the thought of his age.
- A collection of collateral literature covers all aspects of study of Swedenborg and the New Church.
- The archives are a cultural resource containing a variety of documents, letters and photographs relevant to the New Church, the Academy, and the Bryn Athyn community.

The next most important use is to provide materials and information, in various forms, in support of the academic programs of the Academy schools. The library also serves as a resource for members of the local community.

Communities thrive @ your library: National Library Week

This year, the American Library Association celebrates the contributions libraries make to all types of communities. Officially, National Library Week 2010 is April 11 – April 17, but we think libraries should be celebrated all year round! Here are a few words from people who love libraries as much as we do:

- Libraries are community treasure chests, loaded with a wealth of information available to everyone equally, and the key to that treasure chest is the library card. I have found the most valuable thing in my wallet is my library card.
— First Lady Laura Bush
- When you are growing up, there are two institutional places that affect you most powerfully—the church, which belongs to God, and the public library, which belongs to you. The public library is a great equalizer.

— Musician Keith Richards

- My guess is [it will be] about 300 years until computers are as good as, say, your local reference library in search.
— Craig Silverstein, Director of Technology, Google.com
- Whatever the cost of our libraries, the price is cheap compared to that of an ignorant nation.
— Broadcaster Walter Cronkite
- The library is our house of intellect, our transcendental university, with one exception: no one graduates from a library. No one possibly can, and no one should.
— President of the Carnegie Corporation, Vartan Gregorian
- My encouragement to you is to go tomorrow to the library.
— Poet Maya Angelou

Why wait until tomorrow--visit the library TODAY!
